Customer Service Standards

In assisting you as a prospective applicant, you can expect us to:

- o respond courteously and quickly to your requests for information about our grant programs;
- o be able to describe the programs that best suit your needs;
- o provide application instructions and forms that are clear and easy to use;
- o offer prompt and thoughtful advice and guidance in preparing your application;
- o explain accurately the procedures that would be used to evaluate your application and tell you when you could expect a decision.

In assisting you as an applicant, you can expect us to:

- o ensure that the evaluation of your application is fair, expeditious, and informed by the expert judgments of your peers;
- o notify you promptly of the decision on your application;
- o provide substantive reasons for the decision reached on your application;
- o give you helpful advice, if you are unsuccessful, on revising or resubmitting your application.

In assisting you as a grantee, you can expect us to:

- o provide you with an award document that is clear and easy to understand and that sets forth sensible reporting requirements;
- o provide the names of our staff members who will serve as contacts for your reports and for any assistance you may need;
- o answer promptly and satisfactorily all requests for information on NEH policies and procedures;
- o read and acknowledge promptly your reports on grant activities;
- o maintain a professional, helpful relationship with you as you carry your project to completion.

THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE HUMANITIES

In order “to promote progress and scholarship in the humanities and the arts in the United States,” Congress enacted the National Foundation on the Arts and the Humanities Act of 1965. This act established the National Endowment for the Humanities as an independent grant-making agency of the federal government to support research, education, and public programs in the humanities.

The Humanities

The act that established the National Endowment for the Humanities says “The term ‘humanities’ includes, but is not limited to, the study of the following: language, both modern and classical; linguistics; literature; history; jurisprudence; philosophy; archaeology; comparative religion; ethics; the history, criticism, and theory of the arts; those aspects of social sciences which have humanistic content and employ humanistic methods; and the study and application of the humanities to the human environment with particular attention to reflecting our diverse heritage, traditions, and history and to the relevance of the humanities to the current conditions of national life.”

Organization of the Endowment

Grants are made through four divisions (Education Programs, Preservation and Access, Public Programs, and Research Programs) and two offices (Challenge Grants and the Federal/State Partnership).

Equal Opportunity Statement

Endowment programs do not discriminate on the basis of race, color, national origin, sex, disability, or age. For further information, write to Equal Employment Opportunity Officer, National Endowment for the Humanities, 1100 Pennsylvania Avenue, N.W., Washington, DC 20506. TDD: 202/606-8282 (this is a special Telephone Device for the Deaf).

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES THROUGH CENTERS FOR ADVANCED STUDY AND INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH ORGANIZATIONS

The National Endowment for the Humanities provides support to independent centers for advanced study and international research organizations for fellowship and research grant programs for humanities scholars. Centers for advanced study offer scholars opportunities to pursue independent research in the humanities while benefiting from collegial association with scholars in other areas or disciplines of study. American overseas centers for advanced study and international research organizations assist scholars conducting research on foreign cultures. The centers and organizations establish their own peer review procedures for the selection of NEH grant recipients and administer the awards. Tenure of the fellowships at residential centers is for a minimum of four months, and stipends may also vary. Grants made through international research organizations vary in tenure and amount. Eligibility for NEH fellowships and research awards is limited to United States citizens and foreign nationals who have been residents in the United States for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline for the grant. NEH research opportunities are intended for persons who have already completed their formal academic training. Consequently, persons seeking support for work in pursuit of a degree are not eligible for NEH fellowship and research grants. Some of the institutions listed below support predoctoral students with private funding; interested applicants should contact the organizations or centers directly.

For further information and application materials, contact the appropriate center or organization. No application materials are available from the Endowment.

In 2001-2002, NEH fellowships will be available at each of the following centers:

CENTERS FOR ADVANCED STUDY IN THE UNITED STATES

American Antiquarian Society

The American Antiquarian Society (AAS) maintains a major research library in American history, literature, and culture through 1876. The library includes some 700,000 books and pamphlets; 15,000 newspaper titles; 200,000 pieces of graphic arts materials including broadsides, political cartoons, maps, and photographs; 60,000 pieces of sheet music; and nearly 2,000 running feet of manuscripts. The society's holdings are especially rich for projects in the history of the book, including bibliography and the history of printing and publishing; literature; the history of Puritanism; cultural history; intellectual history; American state and local history; and social history, including the history of reform, family history, and women's history. The collections are strong chronologically from the early colonial period to the late nineteenth century. The AAS-NEH fellows are part of a community that includes the AAS staff, area faculty, and the recipients of AAS short-term fellowships (including scholars from all over the U.S. and abroad, Ph.D. candidates, and creative artists and writers producing work for the general public) and other long-term fellows. Further opportunities for collegial association are provided by the society's Program in the History of the Book in American Culture; its seminars in American history, American literary history, American bibliography and book trade history, American art history, and American music history; lunchtime colloquia; and more informal gatherings. At least two AAS-NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

Folger Shakespeare Library

Known internationally for its preeminent collections of Shakespearean and Elizabethan writings, the Folger Shakespeare Library is also a center for research on virtually every aspect of social, cultural, and political life from the medieval period to the mid-eighteenth century. The Folger holds the largest collection outside Britain of early English books, with about 50,000 volumes from the period 1475-1700 and 30,000 eighteenth-century imprints. Its early Continental imprint collection of 35,000 volumes includes 450 incunables, a 2,000-volume Reformation collection, and significant holdings in French and Dutch political pamphlets. The manuscript collection, which numbers 55,000, is especially strong in early correspondence and commonplace books and is extended by such microfilm holdings as the State Papers Domestic from Edward VI through Charles I and papers from the Cecil, Loseley, Harleian, and Lansdowne collections. In secondary materials, the Library holds approximately 85,000 titles. Fellows may join readers and members of the Folger Institute in any of the series of seminars, conferences, workshops, symposia, lectures, and colloquia regularly scheduled at the library. Fellows also have easy access to the Library of Congress. Up to three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

The Huntington

The Huntington is an independent research center with extensive holdings in British and American history, literature, art history, and the history of science. These collections range chronologically from the eleventh to the twentieth centuries. The library contains approximately 500,000 rare books, pamphlets, extra-illustrated books, maps, and ephemera, 500,000 reference works, 5 million manuscripts, and 600,000 photographs. Published guides are available for the American, British, medieval, and literary manuscript collections. The art division holds 75,000 British and American paintings, drawings, watercolors, and fine prints. The Smithsonian Archives of American Art also has a center at the Huntington. There are separate reference libraries in the art and garden divisions. The research division supports an extensive fellowship program to fund short-term fellows and sponsors a number of conferences, lectures, and seminars. Up to three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

Institute for Advanced Study, School of Historical Studies

The Institute for Advanced Study was founded in 1930 as a community of scholars in which intellectual inquiry can be carried out in the most favorable circumstances. It provides Members with libraries, offices, seminar and lecture rooms, subsidized restaurant and housing facilities, and some secretarial and word-processing services. The School of Historical Studies supports scholarship in all fields of historical research, but is concerned principally with the history of western and near eastern civilization, with particular emphasis upon Greek and Roman civilization, the history of Europe, the Islamic world, and the history of art. In addition to these fields, in the academic year 2001-2002 the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation will support three Members in East Asian Studies, including Sino-Japanese interactions and comparisons. Qualified candidates of any nationality are invited to apply for memberships. Apart from residence in Princeton during term time, the only obligation of Members is to pursue their own research. If they wish, however, Members may participate in seminars and meetings both within the Institute and at nearby universities, and there are ample opportunities for contacts with other scholars. Approximately forty Members are appointed for either one or two terms each year. The Ph.D. (or equivalent) and substantial publications are required of all candidates at the time of application. Member awards are funded by the Institute for Advanced Study or by other sources, including the National Endowment for the Humanities, whose support will enable three scholars (either U.S. citizens, or three-year residents in the U.S.) to take up full-year memberships, and the Thyssen Foundation which will support two German citizens.

Institute for Advanced Study, School of Social Science

The Institute for Advanced Study was founded in 1930 and since its beginning has been internationally recognized as one of the world's foremost centers for theoretical research and intellectual inquiry. There are four schools: historical studies, social science, mathematics, and natural sciences. Located on an 800-acre site, the institute is totally independent of Princeton University; however, there is a great deal of intellectual, cultural, and social interaction. The School of Social Science is devoted to a multidisciplinary, comparative, and international approach to social science research and brings together scholars with various perspectives to examine historical and contemporary problems. Disciplines represented in the school have included history, philosophy, and literary studies as well as anthropology, politics, economics, sociology, and other social science disciplines. The school organizes a weekly seminar at which members as well as invited guests present their ongoing work. Each year there is also a general theoretical or empirical focus that provides common ground for roughly half of the members. About fifteen postdoctoral fellows are selected each year. About three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

John Carter Brown Library

The John Carter Brown Library is an independently funded and administered center for advanced study in history and the humanities, located on the campus of Brown University since 1904. The library's collection consists almost entirely of primary printed sources (books, pamphlets, manuscripts, and maps) relating to all aspects of the discovery, exploration, settlement, and development of the Americas, from Hudson Bay to Tierra del Fuego, during the colonial period (1493-ca. 1825). The library's principal holdings emphasize such diverse areas as European accounts of the Americas, Braziliana, native American languages, American revolutionary pamphlets, and Caribbeana. Maritime history and the comparative history of the Americas—Spanish, Portuguese, French, Dutch, English, African, Amerindian—are particular subjects of interest. The library awards approximately twenty short-term fellowships (two to four months) each year, which are open to citizens of every country and to both pre- and post-doctoral scholars, and several long-term fellowships (five to nine months), supported by the NEH, the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, and other agencies. NEH fellowships are restricted to U.S. citizens and foreign nationals who have been legal residents of this country for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline for the grant. Candidates for long-term fellowships may not be engaged in work leading to a graduate degree. Prospective applicants should write to the John Carter Brown Library for further details and for application forms or may access the Library's Web site.

National Humanities Center

The National Humanities Center offers forty residential fellowships annually for scholars in the humanities to work at the center during the academic year. In 2001-2002, eleven of these fellowships will be supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities. Fellowships are open to scholars in all fields of the humanities and also to individuals from other fields of inquiry or from professional and public life if their work has a humanistic dimension. Normally the Center includes several scholars from outside the United States. The Center welcomes applications from senior scholars and from promising young scholars. Applications are evaluated by specialists and by an interdisciplinary panel of distinguished scholars in the humanities. The center provides assistance with the preparation of manuscripts, support for electronic technology, and daily delivery of books and research materials. Each Fellow has a private study. The Center's building includes facilities for lectures, seminars, and conferences. Breakfast and lunch are served daily. The Center is situated in the Research Triangle Park of North Carolina, adjacent to Chapel Hill, Durham, and Raleigh. The Center locates housing for Fellows in these communities. In addition to a fellowship stipend, the center provides travel expenses to and from North Carolina for fellows and their immediate families.

Newberry Library

The Newberry Library, founded in 1887, is a privately endowed independent research library dedicated primarily to study in the humanities. Its collections comprise more than 1.5 million volumes and 5 million manuscripts, with a strong general collection focused on Europe and the Americas from the late Middle Ages to the twentieth century. The Newberry's internationally noted special collections include materials in the following fields: discovery, exploration, and settlement of the New World; history of Native Americans; the American West; family and community history; literature and history of the Midwest, especially the Chicago Renaissance; the Renaissance in Europe; Portuguese and Luso-Brazilian history; cartography; music history and theory; printing; and early philology and linguistics. A variety of fellowships, conferences, and seminars enriches the Newberry's academic community. Four or five NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

The Omohundro Institute of Early American History and Culture

The Omohundro Institute of Early American History and Culture supports study and publication in early American history from the sixteenth century to approximately 1815. Its field of interest encompasses all aspects of the lives of North America's indigenous and immigrant peoples during the colonial, revolutionary, and early national periods of the United States and the related histories of Africa, the British Isles, the Caribbean, Europe, and Latin America. Founded in 1943 as the Institute of Early American History and Culture by the College of William and Mary and the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation and still jointly sponsored by those institutions, the Institute was renamed in 1996 in recognition of a generous endowment pledged by Mr. and Mrs. Malvern H. Omohundro, Jr. The Institute publishes the William and Mary Quarterly, monographs, documentary editions, and a newsletter, regularly plans and supports scholarly conferences, and annually offers one two-year postdoctoral fellowship, a year of which is supported by the NEH, and a one-year Andrew W. Mellon Postdoctoral Research Fellowship. In addition to research and writing, fellows are encouraged to participate with the senior staff of working scholars in the Institute's varied academic activities. Institute/NEH fellows also have the option of spending a summer at the Huntington Library, on a full grant, within five years of their residency in Williamsburg. The potential of an applicant's project for book publication by the Institute is a major factor in awarding both fellowships.

Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture – New York Public Library

The Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture is a research unit of the New York Public Library. It is devoted to collecting, preserving, and providing access to research resources on black heritage. Established in 1926 as a reference collection, it has evolved into a comprehensive research library whose collections number more than 5 million items. They include more than 175,000 bound volumes, 85,000 microforms, 3.5 million manuscripts, 20,000 works of art, 500,000 photographs, and 1,700 serials. The Schomburg Center's Scholars-in-Residence Program assists scholars whose research and writing on black history and culture would benefit from extended access to the center's resources. The program supports postdoctoral research in the humanities on African, Afro-American, and Afro-Caribbean themes. Fellowships funded by the program allow recipients to spend from six to twelve months in residence at the Schomburg Center. Although fellows devote most of their time to research and writing, they are also encouraged to take part in the center's scholarly and educational program, which includes colloquia, symposia, seminars, forums, and research conferences. Two NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

School of American Research

Founded in 1907, the School of American Research is a center for advanced studies in anthropology and allied disciplines. It is dedicated to supporting scholars and publishing original research that contributes to a better understanding of human culture, evolution, and behavior. The School pursues its goals through six programs. It supports resident scholars for nine-month tenures, conducts advanced seminars, awards the J.I. Staley Prize for outstanding books in anthropology, maintains a research collection of southwestern native American art, publishes scholarly books, and sponsors educational events for the public. The Resident Scholar program offers fellows the time and facilities essential for creative intellectual pursuits. The School's unique campus provides an atmosphere that nourishes the scholarly spirit by combining solitude and freedom from academic responsibilities with the lively exchange of ideas found in an active community of scholars. Resident scholars receive a stipend, an apartment and an office on the School's campus, library assistance, and other benefits during a tenure of nine months—September 1 through May 31. Up to three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

Winterthur Museum, Garden, and Library

Winterthur is a center for advanced study of America's artistic, cultural, social, and intellectual history. Its library holds approximately half a million imprints, manuscripts, visual materials, trade catalogues, auction and exhibition catalogues, and printed ephemera for research from the seventeenth century to the early twentieth century. Museum collections include 89,000 domestic artifacts and works of art made or used in America to 1860. Winterthur sponsors a broad range of public and academic programs, including scholarly conferences and two graduate programs, the Winterthur/University of Delaware Program in Art Conservation, and the Winterthur Program in Early American Culture. The museum also publishes scholarly books and Winterthur Portfolio: A Journal of American Material Culture. Winterthur offers an extensive program of research fellowships open to academic, independent, and museum scholars. NEH fellows are provided with office space and computer support, 24-hour access to the library's circulating collections, and circulation privileges at nearby Morris Library of the University of Delaware. Fellows participate in seminars, colloquia, and social events at Winterthur, the University, and other area museums. Foulsham House, a comfortable stone house on the Winterthur grounds, serves as the fellows' residence. One to three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

AMERICAN OVERSEAS CENTERS FOR ADVANCED STUDY AND INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH ORGANIZATIONS

Albright Institute of Archaeological Research, Jerusalem

The W. F. Albright Institute of Archaeological Research in Jerusalem (AIAR) was originally established as the principal overseas center of the American Schools of Oriental Research (ASOR—founded in 1900). In 1970, AIAR was incorporated as an independent institution and renamed after its most distinguished director, W. F. Albright. Since then, AIAR, one of ASOR's three affiliated centers, has continued the American Schools' tradition of promoting and supporting resident pre-doctoral and post-doctoral research in ancient Near Eastern studies, including the disciplines of archaeology, language, literature, history, biblical studies, religion, the history of art and architecture, and anthropology. Its annual program is composed of a series of more than 80 lectures, reports, seminars, workshops, field trips, and social events organized according to its fellows' interests. More than fifty fellows from the United States and several other countries participate as long-term research appointees each year. The Albright Institute, located nearby the Old City of Jerusalem, includes a hostel, a research library, and computer facilities. The living accommodations provide rooms for thirty people, a served dinner, self-service breakfast, and a garden area for tea and coffee. The library, dedicated to Near Eastern studies, contains more than 27,500 volumes, over 450 journal titles, and significant map and artifact collections. In addition to administrative and library computers, the fellows have access to a wide range of hardware and extensive software programs, and hostel rooms are wired for web access and e-mail communications. AIAR also serves as a support base for numerous short-term scholars and visitors and for a large number of staff, student, and volunteer participants in the twenty-four annual excavation and publication projects affiliated with ASOR. AIAR conducts, with the Hebrew University, a joint excavation and publication project at the Philistine site of Tel Miqne-Ekron, and is also the organizing institution for an international research project—The Neo-Assyrian Empire in the 7th Century BC: A Study of the Interaction between Center and Periphery. This project, under the aegis of the Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC) of the Smithsonian Institution, involves 50 scholars working in Bahrain, Cyprus, Egypt, Greece, Iran, Iraq, Israel, Jordan, Spain, Syria, Tunisia, and Turkey. One NEH fellowship is available for 2001-2002, as well as twelve other stipended fellowships and thirteen fellowship fee subventions.

American Academy in Rome

The American Academy in Rome, founded in 1894 and chartered by Congress in 1905, is a working residential community of American scholars and creative artists. Scholarly research at the Academy focuses on a variety of fields, among them classical studies and archaeology, postclassical studies (including medieval and Renaissance studies), modern Italian studies, and the history of art. The Academy's resources include a major research library of approximately 121,000 volumes with particular strength in classical antiquity, Roman topography, and the history of art and architecture. They also include a photographic archive, a research collection of more than 30,000 photographs of ancient sites in Italy, North Africa, and the Middle East. The work of the Rome Prize Fellows is regularly presented through a series of seminars, colloquia, exhibitions, and concerts. There are weekly trips to historical monuments in Rome and lengthy visits twice each year to other parts of Italy and the Mediterranean. In addition, the Academy participates in the union of twenty-three other foreign academies in Rome. Some scholarly studies by Fellows, as well as archaeological excavation reports, are published in the Academy's Memoirs series, which is published by the University of Michigan Press. Three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002. Applications may be downloaded from the Academy's web site.

American Center of Oriental Research

The American Center of Oriental Research (ACOR) was founded in 1968 to serve as a research base for U.S. scholars in Jordan. It promotes research and publication in the fields of archaeology, anthropology, ancient through Islamic history, art history, cultural resources management, conservation and preservation studies, languages, biblical studies, Arabic, Islamic studies, and other aspects of Near Eastern studies. It has 12 full-time employees, a five-story residential facility, and a fellowship program which grants an average of 22 awards for periods of two to six months per year. The library has more than 26,000 books and periodicals. ACOR also offers offices and workrooms; equipment for field projects; a computer room with IBM and MAC personal computers and printers; Internet access; GIS and drafting facilities; a 90-seat lecture hall; an archaeological conservation laboratory; and a darkroom. Over the years more than 140 archaeological and anthropological projects have been affiliated with ACOR. These projects have been instrumental in uncovering Jordan's wealth of prehistoric and historic remains. ACOR scholars have been involved in some of the most significant discoveries in the area, including the Neolithic sculptures from 'Ain Ghazal, the oldest of their kind ever found, and the unique archive of 6th century scrolls found during the 1993 excavations of the Byzantine basilica in Petra. The center has administered and is administering a number of USAID grants for the preservation and presentation of Jordanian antiquities such as the mosaics of Madaba and Petra and the Roman temple on the Citadel of Amman. One NEH fellowship will be available for 2001-2002.

American Council of Learned Societies and Social Science Research Council: International Postdoctoral Fellowships

The ACLS is a private federation of 63 national scholarly organizations dedicated to the advancement of humanistic scholarship in all fields of learning. The SSRC is an international association devoted to the advancement of interdisciplinary research in the social sciences. Jointly they offer postdoctoral fellowships to encourage humanistic research in area studies. Special funding by the National Endowment for the Humanities and the ACLS has been set aside for approximately eight to ten ACLS/SSRC/NEH International and Area Studies Fellows, to be designated among the successful applicants to the central ACLS Fellowships competition. Scholars who are at least two years beyond the Ph.D. may apply for six- to twelve-month fellowships to pursue research and writing on the societies and cultures of Asia, Africa, Latin America and the Caribbean, the Near and Middle East, East Europe, and the former Soviet Union.

American Councils for International Education: ACTR/ACCELS and the National Council on Eurasian and East European Research

The American Councils is a private, not-for-profit education, training, and consulting organization, specializing in the countries of eastern Europe, Russia, and Eurasia. American Councils programs include academic exchange, professional training, institution building, research, materials development, technical assistance, and consulting. The American Councils has forty-six offices in twelve countries of the former Soviet Union and a full-time professional staff of over 270 to support its programs in the region. The American Councils operates as ACTR in Russia and ACCELS in the other newly independent states. The National Council for Eurasian and East European Research (NCEEER) has operated for nearly two decades to encourage research in the humanities and social sciences on eastern Europe and Eurasia by providing grants and scholarships to U.S. scholars and graduate students. NEH funds support in-country research and travel for U.S. humanities researchers engaged in or planning collaborative research projects on any topic in the humanities with researchers in any country of eastern Europe or Eurasia; three NEH grants will be awarded for resident fellowships in these areas. Research topics are not restricted to regional or area studies, but must involve research in the region and a collaborator in the region. U.S. researchers interested in identifying potential collaborators in eastern Europe, Russia, or Eurasia should contact the American Councils.

American Institute of Indian Studies

The American Institute of Indian Studies, a consortium of fifty-two U.S. colleges and universities, was founded in 1961 by scholars committed to increasing accurate, intensive knowledge of India's culture, history, languages, and traditions. The institute's principal activity is the awarding of fellowships to support scholarly research in India on the broadest possible range of topics and disciplines in the humanities. With U.S. offices in Chicago and headquarters in New Delhi, the institute maintains regional offices in Calcutta, Madras, and Pune. Each provides a meeting place for scholars and organized opportunities for seminars, receptions, and lectures. In addition, the institute maintains an Archives and Research Center for Ethnomusicology and a Center for Art and Archaeology, both located at the main administrative center at Gurgaon, just outside Delhi. The staffs at these regional offices and centers obtain necessary clearances for the fellows from the Indian government, secure affiliations for fellows with Indian academic and research institutions, and otherwise facilitate the fellows' scholarly research. The institute awards approximately eighteen long-term doctoral fellowships, ten long-term postdoctoral fellowships, and a few short-term postdoctoral fellowships, all payable in rupees. The fellowships are awarded to scholars of distinction or high promise in all academic disciplines. For 2001-2002, NEH will supplement up to four fellowships in the humanities with U.S. dollars.

American Philological Association/*Thesaurus Linguae Latinae

The American Philological Association invites applications for a one-year fellowship, tenable from July 2001 through June 2002, with the possibility of renewal for one additional year, which will enable an American scholar to participate in the work of the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae Institute in Munich. Fellows at the TLL develop a broadened perspective of the range and complexity of the Latin language and culture from the classical period through the early Middle Ages, contribute signed articles to the Thesaurus, have the opportunity to participate in a collaborative international research project, and work with senior scholars in the field of Latin lexicography. The fellowship carries a stipend in the amount of $31,500 and is made possible in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Applicants must be United States citizens or foreign nationals who have been residents in the United States for the three years immediately preceding the application deadline, already have the Ph.D., or anticipate the award of the degree by July 1, 2001. The fellowship offers valuable experience for scholars in a variety of specialties (e.g., Latin language and literature, Roman law, Roman history, the literature of early Christianity); although it is not limited to individuals working in Latin philology, applicants should possess a thorough familiarity with and a special interest in the Latin language. It is anticipated that applicants will already have a reading knowledge of German and will be willing to work toward proficiency in spoken German. Further details will be sent to applicants upon request.

Applications should include a curriculum vitae, a statement of what benefits the applicant expects to derive from the Fellowship for his/her research and teaching, and the names of three referees, whom the applicant should ask to send supporting letters to the Executive Director without further notice. Candidates will be considered by the APA's TLL Fellowship Committee, which serves as the selection committee. The committee will choose a short list of candidates to be invited for interview at the Annual Meeting in January 2001 in San Diego, California, and the name of the successful candidate will be announced shortly thereafter.

American Research Center in Egypt

The American Research Center In Egypt, Inc. (ARCE), a consortium of forty-one North American universities and museums, was founded in 1948 to promote research in Egypt. Its broad aims are to foster a fresh and more profound knowledge of Egypt and the Near East through scholarly research, to disseminate knowledge of Egypt, and to promote American-Egyptian cultural relations. In pursuit of these goals, ARCE supports archaeological projects conducted by research teams led by senior American scholars, a fellowship program that enables American scholars and graduate students to conduct research in all periods and in all phases of Egyptian civilization, and special historical and literary projects in Egypt in archaeology, art history, Islamic studies, the humanities, and the social sciences. Under a special grant from USAID, ARCE is engaged in a multiproject effort to help Egyptians conserve and preserve their historical monuments. The center, located in Cairo, provides a reference library and a meeting place for scholars. Its staff helps scholars obtain necessary clearances from the Egyptian government and otherwise facilitates their research. Two to three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

The American Research Institute in Turkey

The American Research Institute in Turkey has a membership of thirty-two North American universities and museums. It was founded in 1964 to advance knowledge and enhance mutual understanding between the U.S. and Turkey by supporting and promoting research and study in anthropology, art and archaeology, history, linguistics, philology, and Turkology, “with all its ramifications into social, cultural and economic fields in ancient, medieval and modern times.” Branch facilities in Istanbul and Ankara provide full-time representation in Turkey for American institutions of higher education. Each branch is administered by an American scholar who is appointed as both Branch Director and Resident Fellow. The branches provide researchers in Turkey a base of operations, institutional affiliation, orientation assistance, and introductions to host-country scholars. Istanbul maintains a research facility and a 9,000-volume library in Byzantine, Islamic, Ottoman, and modern Turkish studies. In Ankara scholars have access to a 6,500-volume library on archaeology. Two or three NEH fellowships are available for 2001-2002.

American School of Classical Studies at Athens

The American School of Classical Studies at Athens was founded in 1881 to provide scholars and graduate students in ancient Greek history, art, archaeology, language, and literature the opportunity to pursue their studies and research in Greece itself. At its main building in Athens, the school administers an outstanding research library, the Blegen, with over 70,000 volumes devoted to ancient Greece. In 1926, the school dedicated, adjacent to the main building complex, the Gennadius Library, its second major library resource, which provides scholars of postclassical Greek studies some 100,000 volumes as well as archives dedicated to medieval, Byzantine and post-Byzantine, and modern Greece. The school also sponsors excavations and provides centers for advanced research in archaeological and related topics at its excavations in the Athenian Agora and Corinth, and houses an archaeological laboratory in the main building in Athens. By agreement with the Greek government, the school is authorized to serve as liaison with the Greek Ministry of Culture on behalf of American students and scholars for the acquisition of permits to excavate and to study museum collections. Two to five NEH fellowships for projects of durations of four to ten months each are available for the academic year 2001-2002.

Committee on Scholarly Communication with China

The Committee on Scholarly Communication with China (CSCC) promotes scholarship on China. Cosponsored by the American Council of Learned Societies, the Social Science Research Council, and the National Academy of Sciences, the CSCC's scholarly programs are national in scope; successful applicants are chosen through rigorous, merit-based, open, peer-reviewed competitions. The CSCC currently offers: (1) fellowships for American scholars doing research in China; and (2) fellowships for Chinese scholars coming to the U.S. With funding provided by NEH, the CSCC offers support to American scholars to carry out long-term individual research in China in any discipline of the humanities. Grant tenure ranges from four months to one year. The coordinated efforts of the CSCC's offices in New York City and Beijing assist grantees participating in this program to secure institutional affiliations and support in China to ensure successful research experiences. Up to five grants funded by NEH will be available in 2001-2002. To request an application form, interested individuals should send the following information: 1. highest degree held and date received; 2. academic or other position; 3. geographical area(s) of research; 4. a brief descriptive title of the proposed research; 5. country of citizenship or permanent residence; 6. proposed date for beginning tenure of the award and duration requested; 7. specific award program for which the application is requested; 8. full name and mailing address.

Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute

The Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute ( CAARI ) in Nicosia, Cyprus, which was founded in 1979 and is the youngest of the three institutions affiliated with the American Schools of Oriental Research, welcomes scholars and students specializing in the archaeology, history, and culture of Cyprus. CAARI is located in central Nicosia close to the Cyprus Museum and the main business and commercial district. In addition to hostel accommodation for a total of 12 residents, the Institute has excellent research facilities in the form of a 10,000-volume library, comprehensive map and artifact collections, archival material, and facilities for Internet, scanning, and photography. The libraries of the Cyprus Museum and Makarios III Foundation are also easily accessible. One NEH Fellowship is available for 2001-2002.

International Research & Exchanges Board

Since 1958, IREX and its predecessor organization, the Inter-University Committee on Travel Grants, have administered advanced field research and professional training exchanges between the United States and the countries of Central and Eastern Europe, the Baltic region, the Caucasus, Central Asia, Russia, Ukraine, Mongolia, and China. Committed to international education in its broadest sense, IREX's efforts encompass academic research, professional training, institution building, technical assistance, and policy programs with universities and other organizational partners in the region. IREX provides support to programs and participants through its network of representatives and offices in nearly 50 cities. In its efforts, IREX builds upon strong organizational alliances with major U.S. academic, government, foundation, business, and media partners. NEH funding supports humanities scholars through IREX's core US academic program, The Individual Advanced Research Opportunities Program (IARO). IARO grants support on-site research by postdoctoral scholars for periods of two to nine months at institutions in IREX program countries. Five NEH Fellowships are available for 2001-2002.
